

Replacing our natural gas line on the Pattullo Bridge

Pattullo Gas Line Replacement

The Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure is replacing the Pattullo Bridge, which supports our existing natural gas line over the Fraser River. We need to replace our gas line before the bridge is decommissioned. We're proposing five kilometres of new gas line in Burnaby, to connect to our system in New Westminster.

We're in the early planning stages of the project and are engaging with the community as we prepare to submit an application to our regulator, the British Columbia Utilities Commission. If approved, we expect construction will take place in 2022.

The Pattullo Gas Line Replacement project will ensure we can continue to deliver natural gas to the more than 35,000 local homes and businesses that rely on it every day.

That's energy at work.
