

Replacing our natural gas line on the Pattullo Bridge

Pattullo Gas Line Replacement

The B.C. Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure is replacing the Pattullo Bridge, which supports our existing natural gas line over the Fraser River. That's why we're building six kilometres of new gas line in Burnaby before the bridge is decommissioned.

Construction is expected to start in fall 2021 and finish late 2022. As part of this project, we've partnered with the City of Burnaby to design and build a cycling and walking path along the route to provide a lasting local benefit and thank the community for its patience during construction.

The Pattullo Gas Line Replacement project will ensure we can continue to deliver natural gas to the more than 35,000 local homes and businesses in Coquitlam, Burnaby and New Westminster that rely on it every day. This includes 18,000 customers in Burnaby.

That's energy at work.
